Dedications

Samer T. Ismail dedicates this tournament:

To everyone -- especially the teams competing here this weekend-- who thought that a young college student could have an idea worth pursuing -- thank you.

To all the people who wrote questions, and took time from their busy schedules to help officiate this weekend -- thank you for helping make this tournament possible.

And to everyone who said that a "tournament of dreams" would never work-- thank you, for driving us to work that much harder to see that it did.

And thank you to the Yale Student Academic Competitions teams--for giving me some of the best times of my life, and for reining me in when necessary.

And, finally, to my brother Ahmed--thank you. Without your support, I'd never have had the chance to do this.

Emil Thomas Chuck dedicates this tournament:

To my research advisors and thesis committee for allowing me the opportunity to organize tournaments at CWRU over the years without threats or ultimatums;

To everyone who kept me sane while organizing this tournament, and to everyone whose help will keep me sane (at least for a few moments) this weekend;

To the people who got me involved in this activity (via Academic Decathlon) ten years ago: my teachers at Caddo Parish Magnet High School (Shreveport, Louisiana), namely (in chronological order) Otto Sellers, Riley Bratton, Mary Rounds, Sonja Webb, Thad Pardue, and Cathy Sledge;

To the past and present members of the CWRU College Trivia Club who patiently withstood all my storms and rants about organizing our team and our competitions; we all share in the rewards of hosting high-quality competitions like this one;

To everyone who believed that a network like ours could work and help academic competition both at the high school and college level;

To all the competitors at the high school tournaments I have hosted at Duke and CWRU since 1992, whose experience has prepared me for this event;

Finally, to all the friends I have made through my involvement in academic competition, many of whom have dreamed with me about this moment: I wish all of you were here to see this.

Thank you for making this weekend one I won't ever forget.

Martin J. Dunlap dedicates this tournament:

I'd like to dedicate this tournament foremost to Lisa. Thanks for all your support and for putting up with all these questions (as well as the answers)

I'd also like to thank Mrs. Judith Gross my high school "Brain Brawl" coach for getting me into this competition in the first place.

And in closing, thanks to my parents and the rest of my family for leaving all those books around for me to read.

Benjamin E. Cooper Memorial Quiz Bowl Ambassador Award

Whereas many teams are well recognized by the strength of their winning programs, sportsmanship and service to the academic competition community are not well appreciated. These virtues not only make academic competitions possible, exciting, and enjoyable, but also are fundamentally necessary for the further growth and promotion of this game at all levels of play. By recognizing individuals or organizations that by their example embody the positive aspects of academic competition, all participants involved in quiz bowl honor the competitive spirit and comraderie that quiz bowl competitions provide.

To encourage the appreciation of these individuals and organizations, be it resolved that the Partnership for Academic Competition Excellence establish a Sportsmanship and Service Award. This commendation is to be presented to a high school academic competition team member, advisor, or organization whose character best promotes the spirit and honor of quiz bowl competition. To establish a precedent and standard for future recipients of this award, the PACE committee has further resolved to establish, present, and dedicate this award to the memory of Benjamin E. Cooper of the "It's Academic" team of Georgetown Day School in Washington DC, as the Benjamin Cooper Memorial Quiz Bowl Ambassador Award.

Benjamin Cooper was a model student at GDS who was well-liked among his colleagues and the faculty. He participated in many activities in school and in service to the community. Because of his enthusiasm and encouragement to promote academic competition among his team members, he was selected as the captain of the varsity team for the 1997-98 school year. On August 12, 1997, Ben was tragically killed in an automobile accident while returning from his summer job. His death was traumatic to his family, the GDS community, and the members of the PACE committee who corresponded and worked with him. Even when discussing quiz bowl and the PACE network with us, the PACE committee was impressed with his enthusiasm about the upcoming year and our plans for the inaugural NSC.

The members of the PACE committee hereby honor and confer the first Quiz Bowl Ambassador Award to team advisor Sue Ikenberry and the Georgetown Day School academic team in Ben's honor. The GDS team has had a long history of promoting excellence in quiz bowl competition in the Washington, District of Columbia area and around the country, particularly through its web site.

This citation is hereby approved for presentation for June 19, 1998, at the inaugural National Scholastics Championship at Case Western Reserve University.

PACE would like to confer on a regular frequency this award to appropriate high school academic organizations that positively promote academic competition among their peers and are examples of sportsmanship and community service. Anyone interested in participating in the selection of subsequent recipients should contact PACE to establish procedures of nomination and selection in time for the 1999 NSC.
